2018: Year of the Rebound

Clifford F. Thies

During the prior several years, the political axis was oriented "up" versus "down," up toward liberty in both economic and personal matters, versus down toward government intervention in both of these areas. But, during 2018, the political axis swung back to "left" versus "right," with those on the left tending to favor certain personal liberties, and those on the right tending to favor certain other personal liberties. In particular, those on the left began to systematically take the administration to task for getting the country into foreign entanglements, while those on the right began to defend the administration's foreign adventures.

The 2018 Liberty Index of Congress, like its predecessors, uses four lists of twenty roll call votes to measure the voting inclinations of members of Congress. Each chamber of Congress has its own pair of lists. The pair includes one list for economic liberties and another list for personal liberties. The Liberty Index is, therefore, a two-dimensional index of voting tendency. The roll call votes focusing on economic freedom include taxes, spending and regulations. The roll votes focusing on personal freedom encompass a diverse set of concerns such as freedom of speech and of religion, the right to keep and bear arms, the rights to privacy and to due process, the rights of the accused, equal rights, our system of checks and balances, our division of power between state and federal government, and foreign interventionism.

Being a two-dimensional index, the Liberty Index is capable in theory of distinguishing conservatives from libertarians on the right, and social liberals from progressive socialists on the left, on a relative basis. That is, relative to the political center. The Liberty Index makes no claim about identifying an objective level of libertarianism. However, this year, with so many House Republicans scattered about 50 percent on the personal liberties list of roll vote, the index might not do a good job in distinguishing libertarians from conservatives.

The roll call votes are selected without regard to how particular members of Congress vote. Because of disagreements among well-respected libertarian Republicans on particular votes, the result should only be considered a voting tendency and the process should not be considered to define "the" libertarian position on any particular vote. As in the past, I have shared tentative lists of votes with a small number of trusted advisors prior to publication, for comment and discussion, although I remain the final arbiter.

House Roll Call Votes - Economic Freedom

Since the federal government is currently operating under a two-year budget adopted during 2017, I don't have roll call votes relating to debate over the budget resolution. Nevertheless, I have an adequate set of votes from which to construct a scale capable of identifying the entire range of voting orientation in the House, from pro-economic freedom to pro-government control.

I have three broad-ranging votes on taxing and spending (#138, #243 and #414). (All votes are described in Tables 1 to 4 in the appendix.). In labor policy, I have one vote (#157), financial regulation two votes (#64 and #66), anti-trust policy one vote (#177), welfare policy one vote (#195) and trade policy one vote (#392). I have votes on pork-barrel spending on farming (#194 and #197), renewable energy (#245 and #246), and the military (#311). I have three votes concerning emissions (#346, #348 and #390), and three votes concerning land use (#203, #350 and #354).

House Roll Call Votes - Personal Freedom

The votes I have cover a broad range of concerns. I have a hunting/animal rights vote (#12). I have two privacy votes (#14 and #16) and one illegal immigrant vote (#406). Regarding the rights of the accused, I have five votes (#35, #80, #90, #393 and #448), several of which concern disproportionate punishment. I have one vote on the war of drugs (#268) and three votes on medical freedom (#189, #214 and #372). I have two votes concerning freedom of speech or state-sponsored speech (#345 and #358); and, I have five votes concerning international relations (#220, #227, #248, #421 and #432).

It is useful to contrast Roll Call Vote #248 concerning nuclear nonproliferation to Roll Call Vote #421 concerning world peace. It is in the interest of the United States to ban weapons of mass destruction, such as the chemical weapons ban, and to limit offensive weapons in general. But, we are Liberty Republicans. Such efforts must be realistic, e.g., involve credible inspections and reserving the right to so arm if threatened by others with these weapons. The unfortunate truth is that we have had only one President, Ronald Reagan, who took the commitment to eventual nuclear disarmament provided in the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty seriously.

Roll Call Vote #432 deserves comment. By the time of this vote, the Senate had already signaled its intent to invoke the War Powers Act with respect to U.S. involvement in the civil war and proxy Saudi-Iranian war in Yemen (see Senate Vote #250). The Republican leadership in the House therefore rolled a waiver of the War Powers Act in with the rule for debate on the report of the conference committee regarding the 2018 Farm Bill.

Senate Roll Call Votes - Economic Freedom

Without a budget resolution, and with the Republican Senate leadership slow-walking legislation, it was a challenge to assemble 20 votes dealing with economic freedom. The votes assembled include seven regulatory votes (labor [#63], consumer products [#103], finance [#54, #76 and #109] and environment [#80 and #138]), a welfare vote (#14), and two pork barrel votes (#169 and #178). The list includes an overall budget vote (#99), four very expansive spending votes (#63, #143, #180 and #857), and three focused spending votes (#134, #171 and #192). The list also includes two medical freedom votes (#106 and #226) that I shifted from the preliminary list of personal freedom votes.

Senate Roll Call Votes - Personal Freedom

I, of course, include the nomination of Brett M. Kavanaugh to the U.S. Supreme Court (#223). I also include four nominations to the U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeals (#27, #37, #82 and #145). One of these nominations was effectively a gun rights vote. I include two immigration votes (#35 and #37), a privacy vote (#12), a freedom of speech vote (#97), two sentencing votes (#270 and #271), and two votes involving funding of private or state matters (#178 and #191). I have four votes on Yemen (#58, #260, 263 and #266) and three other votes on national security (#121, #122 and #151).

The votes regarding U.S. involvement in the civil war and Saudi-Iran proxy war in Yemen are very interesting. These votes began in March with an attempt to discharge from committee a joint resolution of Congress invoking the War Powers Act and requiring the U.S. to withdraw from Yemen. That attempt failed on a 55 to 44 vote. A second attempt was made, in November, following the elections. This time, the motion to discharge prevailed, 63 to 37. (This is the signal mentioned in the above discussion of the House personal liberties votes). Subsequently, the joint resolution was adopted by the Senate.

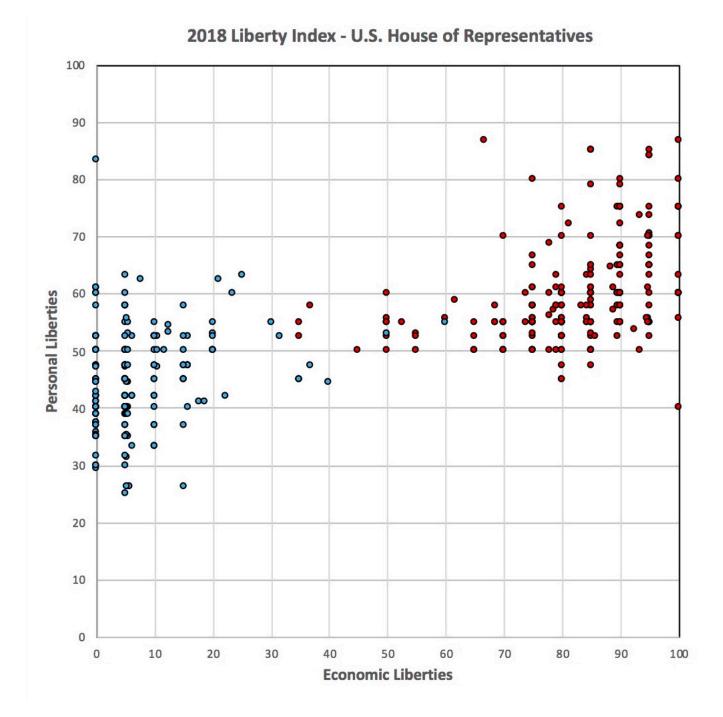

House of Representatives - Scores

The average scores for Republican and Democratic members of the House of Representatives are similar to those of the prior two years on economic liberties, and quite different on personal liberties. During 2016 and. 2017, Republicans averaged 82 and 88 in economic liberties, and Democrats 5 and 4. In comparison, during 2018, the comparable numbers were 82 and 7. During 2016 and 2017, Republicans averaged 67 and 76 in personal liberties, and Democrats 21 and 22. During 2018, it was 60 and 45. As the table below shows, the. majority of Democrats were categorized as progressives (low on both economic and personal liberties) and the majority of Republicans as libertarians (high on both economic and personal liberties). Good numbers of each party are placed in the intermediate categories. The lopsidedness of the distribution of classifications is less pronounced than it was in 2017.

	Economic Liberties	Personal Liberties	2018 Liberty Index	Progressives	Liberals	Moderates	Conser- vatives	Libertarians
Republicans	82	60	71	0	0	35	15	186

In terms of the distribution of scores, the following chart shows a nearly flat distribution with respect to personal liberties. In contrast, the chart for 2017 showed a nearly up-down distribution with respect to personal liberties. This flat distribution doesn't mean that Democrats (blue dots) are better than Republicans (red dots) on personal liberties. It means neither is superior to the other in this dimension. What happened to cause this change in the tilt of the two-dimensional political axis is pretty obvious: The Democrats no longer felt compelled to defend the country's foreign adventures, as they did during the prior administration, and the Republicans started feeling compelled to do so.

Another change from 2017 that can be seen in the following chart is that there is now a bit of an overlap. As to whether this tiny amount of overlap will lead to a new continuum and allow resumption of compromise, if not consensus decision-making, as opposed to knife-edge majority voting, remains to be seen.

All of the top scores are Republicans, starting with this year's #1 in the House of Representatives: Raul Labrador of Idaho, with a combined score of 93. Labrador, a Puerto Rican by birth, served four terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, and before that in the state House of Representatives. He was a member of the House Freedom Caucus and the House Liberty Caucus, and was a perennial top-scorer in the Liberty Index. In 2018, he sought the Republican nomination for Governor, but lost the primary to the then Lt. Governor (who subsequently won the general election).

Other top scorers in the House of Representatives were John Duncan (TN), Tom McClintock (CA), Tom Garrett (VA) and Paul Glosar (AZ), all tied for second with combined scores of 90. Others with combined scores of 85 or higher are: Michael Cloud (TX), Barry Loudermilk (GA), Mark Meadows (NC), Justin Amash (MI), Andy Biggs (AZ), Ted Budd (85), Jim Jordan (OH), Tom Massie. (KY), Dana Rohrabacher (CA) and David Schweikert (AZ).

The worst Republicans were Brian Fitzpatrick (PA) (with a combined score of 40), Chris Smith (NJ) (44), and Elise Stefanik (NY) (45). The best Democrats were Henry Cuellar (TX) (53) and Colin Peterson (MN) (51).

As for the worst Democrats, there are too many to be named here. See Table 5 in the Appendix.

Senate - Scores

Over in the Senate, scores moved more dramatically than they did in the House. On economic liberties, Republicans averaged 65, not 81 (2017) or 75 (2016). On personal liberties, Republicans averaged 58, not 69 (2017 and 2016). On economic liberties, Democrats averaged 11, not 1 (2017) or 8 (2016). On personal liberties, Democrats averaged 54, not 17 (2017) or 12 (2016). With this moderation, most Democrats were classified as Liberals, not as Progressives; and, most Republicans were classified as Moderates, not as Libertarians.

	Economic Liberties	Personal Liberties	2018 Liberty Index	Progressives	Liberals	Moderates	Conser- vatives	Libertarians
Republicans	65	58	61	0	2	30	5	14

The same two Senators who tied for the best combined score last year finished as the top two this year. Finishing #1 was Rand Paul of Kentucky, with a score of 95; and, finishing #2 was Mike Lee of Utah, with a score of 93. Jeff Flake of Arizona again came in third (84). Other top scorers were: Pat Toomey (PA), Steve Daines (MT), James Lankford (OK), Ted Cruz (TX), Bill Cassidy (LA), Joni Ernst (IA) and Ben Sasse (NE). The lowest scoring Republicans were Cindy Hyde-Smith (MS) (with a combined score of 40) and Richard Shelby (AL) (45). The highest scoring Democrats were Joe Manchin (WV) (48) and Claire McCaskill (MO) (43). The lowest scoring Democrat was Doug Jones (AL) (10).
